HELLAS2009GREECE

It is an honor and a pleasure for the Greek Chairmanship of the OSCE to welcome you to the 17th Ministerial Council of the OSCE in Athens on 1-2 December 2009. It is our sincere hope that by working together we will be able to play our part in laying the foundations for a new era of common purpose and cooperation with the aim of building a peaceful and stable Europe.

During our Chairmanship of the OSCE we have acted as an "honest broker" with regard to the rules and values of the Organization in confronting international challenges and existing differences between participating States. These efforts are now culminating in this Ministerial Council meeting which will be hosting representatives of 56 participating States, partner States, International Organizations, and members of the media.

Based on the principles of cooperation and mutual understanding, the Athens Ministerial Meeting provides the opportunity for an open and constructive dialogue in support of our common destiny and our desire for the peaceful co-existence of States and their peoples.

Indeed, Greece, as the host of this conference, has done its utmost to provide the necessary facilities and a constructive environment toward a successful and productive Athens Ministerial Council. Working in tandem with the OSCE participating-States, the OSCE Secretariat, the field operations and the Institutions, Greece remains dedicated to the desire of all States and peoples to contribute to this effort. It is only through our concerted action and the power of unity that we can preserve the most precious good, peace.

Cooperation remains the key.

ACROPOLIS MUSEUM

The monuments of the Acropolis have withstood the ravages of past centuries, both of ancient times and those of the Middle Ages. Until the 17th century, foreign travellers visiting the monuments depicted the classical buildings as being intact. This remained the case until the middle of the same century, when the Propylaia was blown up while being used as a gunpowder store. Thirty years later, the Ottoman occupiers dismantled the neighbouring Temple of Athena Nike to use its materials to strengthen the fortification of the Acropolis. The most fatal year, however, for the Acropolis, was 1687, when many of the building's architectural members were blown into the air and fell in heaps around the Hill of the Acropolis, caused by a bomb from the Venetian forces.

Immediately after the founding of the Greek State, discussions about the construction of an Acropolis Museum on the Hill of the Acropolis began. In 1863, it was decided that the Museum be constructed on a site to the southeast of the Parthenon and foundations were laid on 30 December 1865. A second museum was announced in 1888, the so-called Little Museum. Final changes occurred in 1946-1947 with the second Museum being demolished and the original being sizably extended.

By the 1970s, the Museum could not cope satisfactorily with the large numbers of visitors passing through its doors. In the year 2000, the Organization for the Construction of the New Acropolis Museum announced an invitation to a new tender, which was realized in accord with the Directives of the European Union. It is this Tender that has come to fruition with the awarding of the design tender to Bernard Tschumi with Michael Photiadis and their associates and the completion of construction in 2007.

Today, the new Acropolis Museum has a total area of 25,000 square meters, with exhibition space of over 14,000 square meters, ten times more than that of the old museum on the Hill of the Acropolis. The new Museum offers all the amenities expected in an international museum of the 21st century.

"THOLOS" SHOWS

Virtual Reality: Tour at the Ancient Agora of Athens

Group of 125 people at 20:45, 21:05, 21:25, 21:45

The first unit of productions that are hosted at "Tholos" presents the Ancient Agora of Athens. The spectators enjoy a tour at the site of the Ancient Agora and, with the guidance of a special museum educator, have the opportunity to select the course they will follow themselves. The representation of the Agora in three different moments in history enables visitors to perceive its development through time and the alterations of the function of the site from period to period, as they are recorded in the architectural and city planning differentiations. In the Classical Agora (approximately in 400 BC) emphasis is given to the importance of the state administrative buildings and the existence of a large outdoors area for gatherings and athletic activities. In the Hellenistic years (approximately in 150 BC) a dominant role is played by the large commercial buildings ("stoas") and emphasis is given to the beneficial activity of the Hellenistic rulers. Finally, the Roman Agora (approximately in 150 BC) records the gradual decline as an administrative and commercial centre, enabling the development of its religious and cultural character, since new temples were constructed, as well as an Odeon, a library and a Nyphaeum.

Exhibitions

Free visit from 20:45 to 22:30
with the presence of Museum Educators

1) Meeting at the Ancient Agora

The Exhibition "Meeting at the Ancient Agora" invites visitors to reflect upon the values of freedom, justice, education, isonomy, freedom of speech, sociability and participation to public life. From the Classical Period to the Renaissance and the Enlightenment and to the New Greek state, from the "Reformation of Cleisthenes" to the American and the French Revolution, the ideas and values that were born at the Ancient Agora are still world heritage. Natural exhibits and interactive applications of advanced technology bring to life the social, political and intellectual reality of the city of Athens during the Classical and Early Hellenistic Period (approximately 5th - 3rd century BC). The Exhibition depicts the way modern Europe, and the world community in general, has incorporated the fundamental characteristics of the institutions that were created in the Ancient Agora. It includes digital interactive exhibits, audiovisual productions (historical documents, sound-video documents, oral testimonies, archive material), models of objects (testimonies of the way democracy functioned in the ancient and in the modern world), texts (historical, literary, theatrical, legal, texts from various intellectuals etc) maps, photographs, documents, reproductions of works of art etc.

2) Is there an Answer to Everything? A journey to the Greek mathematics' world.

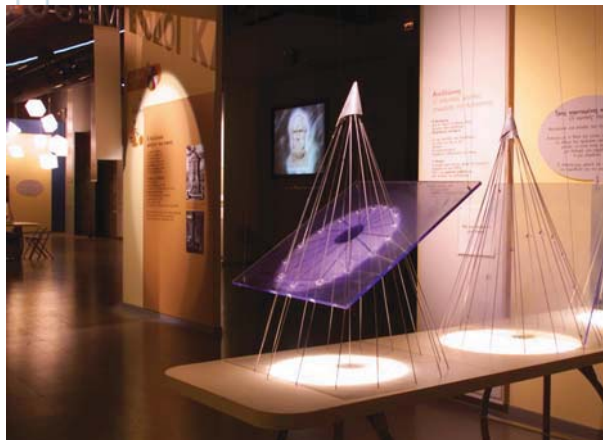

The exhibition presents the development of maths and mathematical thought in the ancient Greek world. Through new technologies (video, digital interactive applications, Virtual Reality exhibits) and the adoption of modern museological conceptions, the exhibition attempts to demonstrate the importance of ancient Greek mathematics for the Hellenic and European culture. The tour begins at the 6th century BC and culminates in the 4th century AD, examining all the significant "events" and people in the history of Greek mathematics. There is a brief reference to pre-Hellenic mathematics of the Egyptians and the Babylonians, as well as to the course of the texts of Greek mathematicians, from the Byzantine monasteries and the Arab copying workshops to the European Renaissance scientists and the period of Scientific Revolution. The presentation of scientific applications in astronomy, mathematical geography and music create a more complete image of ancient Greek mathematics.

3) The sea of gods, heroes and men in the ancient Greek art

The visitors of the exhibition, through various representations of ancient pottery, "travel" to the Greek sea. There they discover, apart from the rich variety of fauna, numerous gods and heroes and revel in antique myths that come to life and have constituted an endless source of inspiration for art and literature from Antiquity to the present day. The vessels with scenes from the sea, of exceptional quality and high aesthetics, owe their wide dissemination to the sea routes: in their majority they were found in Etruria during excavations in the 19th century astounding the archaeologists. Most of them are in the Museum of Louvre and are rather unknown to the Greek public. And although original works are absent, their large scale representations, combined with the excellent quality photographs, allow us to discern details of the ancient drawing, which are often hard to see with the naked eye. Furthermore, the wealth of the coloured image demonstrates the peculiarities of this style and provides a realistic view of the representation. The exhibition includes the "The kingdom of the sea", "The gods of the sea", "Gods and heroes travel" and "The birth of Aphrodite".

Dinner will be available from 20:45 (standing buffet).
